E-Verify (formerly Basic Pilot Program) Database

Use of the E-Verify (formerly Basic Pilot Program) database makes smart business sense because it ensures that all new hires have a legal right to work in the United States. And, it protects employers from fines and penalties for knowingly or unknowingly hiring illegal foreign workers.

It also makes customers happy. Most Americans want to frequent businesses that hire legal workers.

Simply enter the search criteria below to see lists of companies using the E-Verify program.

Business Name

Address

City

State

Zip

Business Type

This directory contains the most recent list of participating companies as provided to SmartBusinessPractices.com by the Department of Homeland Security on October 22, 2007. It is our intention to frequently update this list to provide citizens with the most accurate accounting of smart businesses in their states and communities.

BUSINESS OWNERS: If your company is not listed here, you will want to take steps to get on the list as soon as possible to avoid the public's disapproval.

CONSUMERS: Supporting businesses that hire legal workers is one of the most effective things one can do to encourage these businesses to continue to be leaders in their communities and to persuade other businesses to begin using the E-Verify database.

When you patronize any business, make a point of telling the clerks, managers, waiters, hosts and other personnel that you either approve of their being part of the verification program or that you are disappointed that they aren't -- and perhaps that you are considering discontinuing your relationship with them if you don't see their name show up on this list.

The more businesses that join this program, the more illegal aliens who will voluntarily go back to their home countries. More than 200,000 long-time settled illegal aliens in this country already leave the U.S. each year because the tiny bit of enforcement now in place makes their lives too uncomfortable. Imagine how many more will leave as fewer and fewer businesses are available to hire them.
